"THE FAVOURITE NEVER WINS!"

SCENES AT EPSOM ON DERBY DAY.

PRINCE AGA KHAN'S "EAR-TO-EAR" SMILE.

LONDON, June 4.

A stranger dropped down somewhere between Tottenham Corner and Epsom Grandstand this morning (or on any Derby Day) could be forgiven for thinking that this was no mere race meeting but a mass migration. If it were not a joyous occasion, one might suppose that this porridge-like stream of men, women, and things on wheels and all flowing slowly one way was a flight from some calamity. The passionate howls of the tipsters by the wayside would help the illusion of distress.

Strange Companions.

In the roadway top-hatted men and daintily dressed women mixed up with Eastenders, touts, and hangers-on of every variety struggled to make progress through the jam of motor-cars, and into this fleeing crowd there had somehow got caught the staff of a circus, gipsy women barchaded carrying babies, an old man hideously tricked out as a clown, and jockeys down on their luck.

There had joined the fight also a company of open-air evangelists, who, as they pushed their way, were still bawling the news of salvation and holding up banners inscribed with tremendous texts.
Along the edge of the grass were ranged hundreds of motor-buses as if ready to carry people away to safety, mingled with carts, loaded with bottles and food. All this confused throng was thrusting on towards the grandstand, which stood high above the medley like a mountain of refuge.

When one had succeeded in taking sanctuary it was possible from the top of the mountain to take in the amazing scene of Derby Day. A heavy, sultry mist lay upon the Downs blurring all detail, but making more vaguely impressive the spread of humanity far below. Every Derby they say is a "record" Derby, but an old racing man who was up there with me, and who had seen forty-eight Derbys, said he had never seen such a crowd. Over great spaces of the hill it was so solid that the faces looked like a sort of lake of pinkish liquid.

The Swings and Roundabouts.

Movement was impossible for many thousands of sightseers, for they were imprisoned tight in the spaces between the marquees and booths, and all the time two black torrents of late-comers were pouring across the course into the lake.
The flat expanse of humanity was enlivened by bright newspaper posters, and tipsters' umbrellas, and on one place a complete fair was in progress, with people in swing-boats soaring over the heads of the crowd.
It was odd while a race was being run to see them still swinging there unconcernedly. All round on the edges of this immense pool were cars in parks forming a sort of black shore. Away beyond all this were quiet, misty woods and unpolluted meadows. With all its diversity the crowd was curiously uniform.

Gone for ever is the picturesqueness of Frith's "Derby Day."
The races have been mechanised and regimented to a depressing extent.
Even the tipsters look like City men, and one greeted with pleasure as a survival of the lively old days a woman tipster attired as a Red Indian with feathers. The Derby has become comparatively respectable in appearance, but it is not dull. From that vast congregation of hot and overcrowded people rose a continual joyous murmur, varied by shrieks of laughter, and though only a fraction of the multitude could see the races, or perhaps wanted to, they were there on Derby Day and that was enough.

The Royal Arrival.

The Union Jacks that fluttered everywhere testified to the loyalty of the crowd. When about one o'clock the King and Queen, with their sons, were seen high overhead in the stand the murmur changed to an outburst of hearty cheering.
Everyone was genuinely glad to see the King when he came to the edge of the balcony and waved his hand.
He looked animated and well. The Royal standard on the top of the stand told of the King's arrival to thousands who could not see him.
With the King in his place everything became animated in the enclosures. Owners and trainers gathered round the ring below the Jockey Club stand, discussing with affected weariness the chances of the great race. In the politest places of the course the silk hat was supreme, but this male monotony was pleasantly varied by shimmering frocks, and even a few flowerlike parasols.

The course, which nowadays is kept carefully untrod, was in perfect condition. The long grass, deliciously green, was a refreshing and cooling contrast to the hot and feverish-looking expanse of machines and men. After the 1.30 race there was a big trek to the paddock, where there was plenty of room under the moist trees, and one could visit the delicate hooded horses in their temporary stables and risk a pound bet in the new Tote. For some technical reason it is impossible to place the Tote on the open downs where its popularity could be tested. It was doing a fairly good business with the silk-hatted customers.

"Dilute Must Win."

The great race approached. If you could have canvassed the multitude beforehand there would have been an over-whelming majority for one opinion, Dilute must win.
Everyone had said so, and the experts in the journals, either dogmatically or as the outcome of elaborate reasoning, had declared that no other result could be expected by reasonable men. So when the horses came suddenly along to parade before the King all eyes first sought the bay horse that won the Two Thousand Guineas, and his jockey Ray, in his striking costume of blue with yellow stars.
But here and there a stubborn voice was heard to say that whatever else happens the favourite never wins. And they were right.
Silence fell as the long line of runners turned before the King's box and jumped and danced before cantering away to the starting-gate.
The sun came out hot and strong,
but the air was too misty for one to see clearly the horses as they fretted and fidgeted at the gate before the start. A curious explosive sound from thousands of throats meant that the race had begun, but nothing but the swift-moving bunch of jockeys caps far away across the course, the only moving thing in a rigid scene, was to be made out until the horses rushed round the corner into the straight.

It is but truth to say that for nearly an hour after the race the Aga Khan was a more conspicuous figure than ever his fine horse had been. In the members' enclosure he was mobbed in a genteel way, but I observed that he was as ready to converse with tiny men in cloth caps as he was to exchange hand grips with some of the greatest in the land.

The Aga Khan.

When he was eventually joined by his son, and together they walked down the course, he was again applauded in a way that proved beyond question that part of the vast multitude had already swallowed and forgotten their disappointment.

For Blenheim, except to a very tiny minority, was neither an expected nor a popular victor.

It was Rustom Pasha, the Aga Khan's first string, and second favourite in the betting, that carried the piles of money.

What other country, I wonder, would so generously cheer the owner of a horse that had clearly beaten the one he obviously expected would be first past the post?

The Winning Instinct.

I heard afterwards that Wragg, whose second Derby victory this was—he steered Felstead two years ago—felt certain he would win long before he reached Tattenham Corner. But that was most decidedly not the belief of the spectators.

They were hushed into an aching silence as the seventeen runners completed their trot to the post. From my point of vantage I could see scurrying mobs rushing hither and thither as though they were hurried on their way by machine-guns, but the only real and detached noise was that which came from an evangelist with a cornet directly opposite the grand stand.

This year—and there is no doubting his ability on the instrument—he played "When I survey the wondrous Cross," and he had just reached that line, "My richest gains I count but loss," when the wail of his cornet was drowned and suffocated by a tumultuous roar that was a blend of groan and moan and ecstatic howl.

"They're off!"

Diolite First Away.

That was all, and tens of thousands of times has it been heard, but never as it was heard yesterday. The exact number of people on the Downs will probably never be known, but it seemed to me that there were at least as many as ever, although it is also true to say that it was only the main highway to Epsom that in the morning was congested.

The many by-ways were almost as free of traffic as they will be any day next week. But what a moment that was when the first thrilling leap was made by the seventeen thoroughbreds.

Diolite, drawn number five, was first away, as was only fitting, considering he was the favourite at 11 to 4, but right behind him, and almost treading on his flying heels, were Ballyferis and Trews, and the two outsiders, Bargany and Tetragem.

The cruel hill that all Derby runners have to mount before they can properly get into their stride appeared to be no more than a stretch of level turf to the favourite, but within half a mile he began to ease noticeably, and as the Buries were gained those extraordinary men who are called "readers" were whispering in the Press stand that he was done with, and that Rustom Pasha would be in the lead when the field again came clearly into view.

They were right. The course slopes in the direction of Tattenham Corner, but long before the horses reached that breaker of equine hearts Rustom Pasha was out in front with Diolite next in attendance, and Ballyferis and Silver Flare occupying the third and fourth positions.

ADVICE FOR INVESTORS.

READERS are reminded that inquiries relating to the share market are answered on page 12 every Tuesday by "Kufan." Letters should be sent to this office, and must be accompanied by writer's name and address, not for publication. Letters should be addressed to "Kufan," care of the Editor.

As the corner was turned Rustom Pasha, on the rails, was galloping hell-for-leather, but, as Diolite was now racing abreast with him, those whose money was on the favourite, and the others with sweepstake tickets, comforted themselves with the remembrance that Sir Hugo Epsom that in the morning was congested.

And here was the horse practically neck and neck with Rustom Pasha, it was difficult, indeed, to distinguish between the blue and yellow stars of Diolite's jockey and the green and chocolate hoops of the hunched-over mannikin on Rustom Pasha.

Brilliant Riding.

But lying about seventh was Blenheim, whose name had scarcely been heard up to that time. In front or on a level with Blenheim were Iliad, Trews, Ballyferis, and one or two others.

The cries now were for the two favourites, but once in the straight it became clear even to inexperienced eyes that Rustom Pasha had shot his bolt and that Diolite, too, was fading.

Then for a breathing space it looked any odds on Iliad being the winner, but in what was the equivalent of the final strides Wragg exhibited magnificent jockeyship, lifted Blenheim to victory.

The official verdict was a length between first and second, and two lengths between second and third.

Silver Flare was fourth, and Trews, who suffered a swift collision at Tattenham Corner, fifth. It is not for me to say whether this year's Derby was poorer than its predecessors, or finer—the time was nearly four seconds longer than the record—but I do know that of the very many I have seen this of 1930, chiefly because of the Prince Aga Khan's ear-to-ear smile, will remain most deeply etched in my memory.

HUMOUR: ANCIENT AND MODERN.

He "There was something I wanted to say to you, but I forgot what it was."
She: "Was it 'Good night'?"

"Peculiar situation in India, isn't it?"
"Yes, no matter how hard a fellow works, he can't make his salt!"

Mother: "Hurry, Jane, or we shall not reach the church in time to see the wedding."
Jane (aged 7): "Is there only one showing, Mother?"

"How much are rooms here?"
"Two dollars and three dollars a day, sir."
"What's the difference?"
"The two dollar rooms are all taken."

Smith: "I've got a little attachment here for your radio."
Neighbour: "Thanks very much, Smith. Let's have a look at it; I'm always interested in something new."

Smith: "Well, it's just a brick and a yard of rope, and the river's the second turning on the right."

Some time ago a section foreman was severely criticized by the road-master for the careless handling of track material by his men.

"For instance," said he, "a few days ago one of your men was seen to thoughtlessly throw a spike into the weeds. Don't you realize they cost money?"

"I know they do," returned the foreman. "I had my men spend three days looking for that spike."

In a Montrose school recently a little girl informed her teacher that an airman was flying over Montrose late the night before.

"What was he doing?" asked his teacher.

"Please, Miss, he was looking for his children," was the unexpected answer.

"Looking for his children?" said the teacher. "What do you mean?"

"Daddy," said he'd lost his hair."

Bobby was trudging bravely along, but found the walk which he was taking with his father rather long and tiresome. Finally, he looked up and said, "Please carry me, Daddy, I'm all out of gas."

Grandma: "Oh, Jenny, darling, I am surprised. Aren't you going to give your brother part of your apple?"

Jenny: "No, Grannie. I've did that and she's been criticized ever since."

Twelve-year-old Marjorie had been reading about Egypt. "Do you know what the oldest flower in the world is?" asked her mother, thinking the answer would be the lotus.

Marjorie thoughtfully responded, "I suppose it would have to be the apple-blossom!"

A commercial traveller calling upon a new customer produced by mistake a snapshot of his fiancée instead of his business card.

"That's the firm I represent," he said.

The customer examined the somewhat determined-looking features of the young woman, and returned the photograph with the remark: "I'm afraid you'll never be a manager."

The traveller looked at the long list of calls and the numerous trains he had to catch during the week's trip.

"I don't mind getting up early," he said, "but you've not even left time for meals."

"Your car can eat on the trains," replied the manager. "You can't waste time with all those calls to make."

The traveller departed and was again on the mat when the week was over.

"Well," said the manager, "how many orders?"

The traveller hesitated for a moment and then said cheerfully: "Oh, I haven't got any orders, sir, but I caught all those trains!"

WAY DOWN SOUTH AGAIN.

At the Queen's Theatre to-day is showing another picture dealing with old-time days on the Mississippi. If there is something reminiscent of the "The Show Boat" about this film, that is no disadvantage, though as a matter of fact the two stories are quite dissimilar. "The Mississippi Gambler" is a dramatic and romantic all-talkie picture in which Joseph Schildkraut and Joan Bennett appear in characters which suit them admirably. It is a thrilling story of a gambler's bold bid for the biggest stake he ever had a chance of winning—and his gallant refusal to take advantage of his wonderful luck. In other words, the gambler shows he can be a gentleman.

The setting of this interesting story is very attractive, and the photography excellent, as one would expect from the man who was responsible for "The Show Boat" filming.

Two amusing comedy pictures precede the big picture at the Queen's, together with the usual news pictures.

"Sweetie!" at the Central.

A very lively picture is being shown at the Central Theatre for four days—"Sweetie!" in which Nancy Carroll shines. There are a number of very catchy musical numbers in this picture, and the cast includes Helen Kane, Jack Oakie, William Austin, and Stanley Smith.

Nancy Carroll is the chorus-girl who falls in love with the Pelham boy's school where William Austin is an eccentric Professor and where Stanley Smith is a student. Stanley is her boy friend. He would rather stick with the captaincy of dear old Pelham's team than leave school to join Nancy on the stage. When Nancy gets control of the school she does her best to have Stanley "banged out," until somebody makes her see the wonders of real school spirit and she relents, with devastating results to the football team of Oglethorpe, the rival school.

Thrill at the Majestic.

The admirers of Priscilla Dean who thronged the Majestic Theatre yesterday found her latest Metro-politan picture, "Jewels of Desire," exceptionally delightful. It is safe to say that in none of her recent offerings has she been seen to finer advantage than in this thrilling photo-play. John Bowers as the hero and Walter Long as the villain filled their featured roles with unusual artistry, and both scored personal triumphs by their excellent portrayals.

Of course, one expects to see quick-fire action in any picture starring Miss Dean. From book-agent to a hunter for buried treasure on a lonely island, this dynamic star runs the gamut of thrills in her accustomed virile manner. There are many intensely interesting scenes in which Miss Dean's flair for fighting against odds and winning is given ample play.

ECHO OF JUNK PIRACY.

PART OF KIDNAPPED CREW RELEASED.

Nine of the twelve kidnapped persons of a Cheung Chau fishing boat, which was pirated off She Muk Chau in Chinese waters on the night of June 22, have been released by the pirates and returned to Cheung Chau on Friday. The released party consisted of two men, two women and five children. Three members are still detained by the pirates for ransom; these are Chan Chuen Shun, master of the junk, Chuen Sui Heq, the four-year-old son of the master, and Leung Tai Yau, a fisherman.

With a crew of 25, the fishing junk left Cheung Chau on the evening of June 22 for the fishing grounds. Off She Muk Chau, thirteen members of the crew left the junk in four small boats to take up certain positions to stake their fishing nets. A large pirate junk came alongside the fishing vessel, and before any resistance could be put up the pirates had it under control.

They commandeered this vessel, which had twelve persons in it, and sailed away. The pirates also fired at the four dinghies containing the remaining of the 25 members, and killed one 10-year-old boy and wounded two men.

The fishing crew in three of the sampans were left stranded in the sea and were eventually picked up by a Police launch. Two men, who were in the fourth sampan, managed to reach Cheung Chau Island, and later arrived at Hong Kong to make the report.

GIRL GUIDE'S PLEA FOR ANIMALS.

PRIZE-WINNING ESSAY.

The prize recently offered by the Hong Kong S.P.C.A. for the best essay on cruelty to animals was won by a Girl Guide in the 2nd Kowloon Company. Our readers will be interested to read the impression of this observant young lady of fourteen upon everyday scenes in the Colony. We quote as follows, inserting a few cross-headings:—

Spoiled Pets.

There are not very many animals to be found in Hong Kong, and those that are in the Colony are not very well treated. Most of these animals are used for domestic purposes. It is hard to make people realise that animals have feelings, and so should not be so badly treated as they are. But there are some animals kept as pets, that may be termed as "spoilt." These become overfed, grow lazy and fat, and live comfortably. Let us see how pets and domestic animals should be kept, and what improvements should be made.

Dirty Dogs.

When going for a walk round the poorer districts of Hong Kong and Kowloon, many ways of ill-treatment to cats, dogs, and cows and other domestic animals can be found. One sees dogs with cuts and gasies all over the body, ears, and legs, bleeding and open wounds here and there; and dogs with dirty coats, showing that they have not been washed for some time; and you will also see dogs with cheek bones standing out most prominently. What does all this mean? one may ask. The answer is obvious. The dogs have not been cared for properly, no cleaning and washing of wounds, no regular baths in a week, and no regular meals a day. If I will ever have a dog, I would see that it will have all its wounds and cuts—if it does have any wounds and cuts—attended to; that it has at least one bath a week; and also that it has its proper meals, not less or more.

Cruel Policemen.

Another thing that one may object to being done to dogs, is the way that dogs without muzzles and stray dogs are caught. They become most cruelly treated. They are picked up by the tail or hind legs, and then roughly pushed inside the cage. Another way is to half strangle the poor dog, by catching it with a rope threaded through a thin wooden pipe, and then tying it, at one end, into a loop, ready for the dog to get in. Yet another way, which is most cruel, is to shoot stray dogs. Why cannot the man find out whose dog it is, and then fine the owner for carelessly letting the animal out of the house? Instead of shooting the dog, without anyone knowing.

The Fish That Vanished.

Cats are also not very well kept in some homes. Some time ago, whilst living at Jordan Road, a great commotion was heard outside my window. I looked out to see what was the matter, and learned from one of the servants that the cat upstairs had eaten up a fish, lying on the table. Then the servant upstairs came in, just in time to see the cat finish the fish. When she saw the cat licking its lips she grew most angry, and being afraid of her mistress too, she picked up the cat and flung it downstairs to the ground-floor. It was with much difficulty that the cat was brought back to its senses. Every living thing must have food, and enough of it. So one has to see to it that cats and dogs have regular meals, just as a human being has to have food.

Speeding the Plough.

Yet another domestic animal, that is often badly treated, is the ox and the cow also. When the ox is ploughing the field, and patiently plods on, too slow for the greedy farmer—track! goes the whip. He cannot see that the poor creature is doing its best, that the harness is hurting, and rubbing against its shoulder making it bleed. Cows and oxen should be treated more gently, the stick and whip should not be used too often, except when really necessary.

The birds and rabbits in a bird-shop are not well looked after.

You can see cage upon cage of birds, and rabbits, and all stacked together untidily. There is either not enough room, to fly about, or not enough bird seed, or not enough water to drink. Wild birds should not be kept in cages. They pine away for fresh air and freedom and often die. This should not be. If a person wants to keep a bird-shop, that person must see that the birds are comfortable, and given food and warmth.

Stuffing Poultry With Sand.

There is still another bad way of treatment that is often done to chickens and capons. It is only natural that a person wants his goods to sell, but is it right to cheat all customers? A friend of mine once saw large lumps of sand or other indigestible substances being pushed down a capon's throat, to make the bird put on more weight, and then sold to people. This also applied to what is done to ducks and turkeys too. If the man wants to make money, he must do it in the right way—feed his chickens, ducks, or turkeys, and for the ducks, give them or make for them a pond to swim in, then his chickens, ducks and turkeys will grow fat and catch the eye of the marketer.

Even pigs are not well kept; they certainly are not well carried in their cages. One on top of the other, I pity the bottom one! A little more time and work, will not hurt the owner, so why not make the most of it? The pigs are most uncomfortably placed, with their legs poking out, and no room to move in. I wonder how can they stand the strain!

I am glad to say, though, that ponies, goats, and animals that have to be slaughtered are exceptionally well-minded, and are caused very little discomfort.

Want of Thought.

If a person wants to keep animals and pets, he must see that they are treated well, or it will be of no use his keeping them; and if everyone who does keep pets and animals will look after them properly, there will not be so many cries against ill-treatment of them. Let us hope that in future animals will take a little more space in our thoughts, and that they will be treated as they ought—not like slaves, but more like a human being.

Governor and Lady Peel as Patrons.

In regard to the general activities of the S.P.C.A. in Hong Kong, we are informed by the Secretary that His Excellency the Governor and Lady Peel have kindly consented to become patrons of the Society. COLONIAL OFFICE
CONFERENCE.BENEFIT OF DEVELOPMENT FUND.

[BRITISH WIRELESS SERVICE.]

RUGBY, June 27.
Mr. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions, addressed the plenary session of the Colonial Office Conference to-day.

Mr. Thomas referred to remarks which he made in the House of Commons regarding the mistaken view that this country was in a position of receiving benefits from the overseas Dominions and Colonies, but was conferring nothing in return. He again emphasised the great contribution which, in very difficult circumstances, the Old Country was making towards Empire development, an important instance of which was the Colonial Development Fund.

In the expenditure of the Fund, the Home Government looked to the Colonial Governments for advice and the formulation of proposals, but he urged them to take the long view. So far as the Government were concerned, they intended to put the widest possible interpretation on the term "Colonial development." He felt sure the Colonial Development Fund would tend to relieve our economic position here at home and develop the prosperity of the Colonial Empire.

Referring to the Colonial Development Advisory Committee, Mr. Thomas, on behalf of the Government, thanked Sir Basil Blackett, Chairman of the Committee, for the tremendous amount of work he had done and was doing in this connexion.

Sir Basil Blackett, on behalf of himself and of the Colonial Development Advisory Committee, expressed his gratification at Mr. Thomas' observations and his pleasure at having this opportunity of meeting representatives of the Colonial Administrations at the Conference, as the Committee wished to learn thereby the Colonial Governments' needs. He said from August, 1923, to June 29, 1930, the cost of schemes submitted to the Committee by Colonial Administrations was £3,560,000, of which it was expected £2,500,000 would be expended in this country. The assistance recommended by the Committee towards these schemes amounted to £1,774,000, spread over five years. These figures included two very important schemes in Africa, namely, the Zanzibar bridge scheme and that for the development of Maramba iron ore deposits in Sierra Leone, together with railway construction and harbour development involved.

COLONIAL SCHEMES OF DEVELOPMENT.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

LONDON, June 27.
Addressing the Colonial Office Conference, Sir Basil Blackett, chairman of the Colonial Development Advisory Committee, stated that schemes submitted to the Committee up to the present would cost £3,560,000, of which it was expected £2,500,000 would be spent in the United Kingdom.

The Committee recommended grants and loans of £1,774,000 in this connection. Further schemes had also been forwarded to the Colonial Office to cost £5,000,000, with an expenditure of £1,500,000 in England and £2,500,000 assistance from the fund.

R.100 FLIGHT TO CANADA.DEPARTS AT THE END OF JULY.

[BRITISH WIRELESS SERVICE.]

LONDON, June 27.
Lord Thomson, Air Minister, stated at the Imperial Press Conference to-day, that the airship R.100 would leave for Montreal in the last few days of July, and that he would himself be making the journey in the airship R.101 to India in September.

Lord Thomson said he could never see that the flight across the Atlantic from east to west by aeroplane would be a commercial proposition. Experts were now in Greenland considering another route, and he believed their investigations would result in something practical within the next eighteen months or two years. What a factor that would be in linking the Old World with the New when they would be able to go from Croydon to Chicago, through Canada, in three or four days!

AIRSHIP IN AIR PAGEANT.

[BRITISH WIRELESS SERVICE.]

RUGBY, June 29.
The airship R.101 left her mooring mast at Cardington again this morning and flew over London on her way to take part in the Royal Air Force display which is being held at Hendon this afternoon.

King George, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, Cabinet Ministers and diplomats will be among those who will watch the air pageant.

Year's Technical Progress.

The rehearsal of the pageant which took place yesterday not only provided spectacular items illustrating British flying skill at its best, but gave evidence of technical progress far in advance of any achieved in one year in the history of this notable service exhibition of flying. There were no fewer than 16 new or practically new types of aircraft, both service and civil, and for the first time was seen a thoroughly effective military fighter with speeds in excess of 200 miles hour at heights of over three miles above the earth. This speed which only a few years ago would have been considered creditable in a Schneider trophy racer just capable of holding a pilot is to-day combined with such essential military qualities as a roomy cockpit, electrically heated clothing, oxygen apparatus, a couple of guns, necessary ammunition, and possible wireless apparatus as well. This type of machine, which is represented by the Hawker Fairy Firefly, Bristol Bulldog, and De Havilland Napier Halford monoplane, is known as an interceptor, fighter, and has been produced solely to meet the peculiar needs of defence of London against a hostile air attack.

Wireless Weather Maps.

The Air Ministry states that in the course of the flight of the airship R.101 from Cardington to Hendon yesterday opportunity was taken to transmit weather maps by wireless to the airship from the Cardington Meteorological Office, and the experiment proved successful.

INDO-CHINA DEBATE.

FRENCH CHAMBER'S VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

[Havas Agency.]

PARIS, June 27.
At the conclusion of a debate upon Indo-China affairs, the Chamber rejected by 323 votes to 260 a Radical motion asking for the creation of a Committee of Control.

The Chamber also voted a motion of confidence in the Government in order to fight Communism in Indo-China and to apply the traditional French principles of generosity and justice in dealing with the natives.

PARIS, June 28.

The discussion in the Chamber on the events in French Indo-China has ended.

It was again moved by 323 votes to 260 that the Premier, M. Daladier, should make an Order of the Day asking that a Parliamentary Commission be sent to Indo-China to make an enquiry into the situation.

The voting for the Order was signified by a unanimous show of hands, whilst a vote of confidence was given to the Premier, declaring that the Chamber "sends its sympathy to the families of the victims of the riots" and approves of the Government's declarations.

The motion further states that it trusts that the Government will fight energetically all forms of Communistic activity, and apply to Indo-China and all the other Colonies to traditional French political principles, based on the spirit of generosity, solidarity and justice for local peoples. It hopes that the spirit of faithful assistance will continue in the Colonies the work of civilisation, and that the reforms of France will be realised.

Commission of Enquiry Promised.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

PARIS, June 28.
The discussion on interpellations concerning Indo-China wound up with a declaration by the Premier, M. Tardieu, who confirmed the statement that he would appoint a commission of enquiry.

Opposition to the resolution, criticising the Government's policy in Indo-China, was rejected by 323 votes to 260, after which the Chamber passed a vote of confidence on the Government's ability to deal energetically with Communistic plots in Indo-China.

RUBBER INDUSTRY.

OPTIMISTIC SPEECHES
IN LONDON.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

LONDON, June 27.
Mr. H. Fildes, proposing the toast of the rubber industry at the annual dinner of the Malayan Planters' Association, said that with the multifarious uses to which rubber was put and with the spread of its uses in civilisation the prospects for the future must necessarily be bright.

Sir Stanley Poir said that though rubber was now in the doldrums he hoped that they would all keep cheerful and not become pessimists. There was a good time ahead, and they should all sympathise with the men on the spot who were carrying on amid great difficulty.

Lord Goldwyn said there was no reason for the present pessimism. People were selling good shares for no apparent reason. There were difficulties throughout the world, but as a banker he was hopeful that prosperity would soon be restored.

THREE WORKMEN
KILLED.FIFTY-FOOT FALL FROM GLOUCESTER BUILDING.WOODEN PLATFORM BROKEN
BY FALLING POLE.

Three coolies lost their lives as a result of an accident at Gloucester Building on Saturday.

The accident, the exact cause of which is not certain, took place in the morning. It appears, however, that a wooden platform about fifty feet high, on which five men were working, was broken by a falling pole. The men were thrown down—one dying almost at once. Of the remaining four, one managed to hold on to a steel rope as he fell, and consequently sustained only minor injuries. The other three were very seriously injured and on Saturday two of them died in hospital.

When the accident occurred there was no lack of assistance from the offices nearby. Members of the St. John Ambulance Brigade and Dr. Coogan were early on the scene, doing what they could for the injured.

AMERICAN LEGAL
SENSATION.COUNSEL SHOOTS HIMSELF
IN COURT.

[REUTER'S AMERICAN SERVICE.]

YOUNGSTOWN (O.), June 27.
The hearing of the case for an injunction to prevent the merger of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation was stopped dramatically to-day, when Mr. L. A. Manchester, the chief counsel for the former Company, shot himself dead in court.

The act was committed, apparently, because of a nervous breakdown. The case has been adjourned.

The collapse of the wooden platform as stated above, is believed to be due to a pole falling on it. The pole, it is understood, was employed in the work of hoisting a derrick to the fourth floor, but for some reason the pole slid out of its position on a steel beam and in falling, caught the platform in the centre, breaking it in two.

He used to be rude about the cold joint and allude to it as "Ichabod." And poke the tomatoes about to find one that wasn't squashy, and leave the apple tart's pastry on his plate and talk about heavy handed cooks and...

Well you know how things used to be on Mondays... till you thought of that shattering retort, "All right, you buy me a Frigidaire then!"

Of course, he did in the end—and now Monday sees Ichabod metamorphosed into vol-au-vent, since cook's pantry has miraculously acquired a flaky lightness (only because he chills it in Frigidaire before popping it in the oven), and the salad always seems fresh picked, it's so cool and crisp, and everybody wants to know the secret of your household marketing because they've "never eaten such tender steak, my dear" (which, of course, is due to Frigidaire again), and he swears Frigidaire would be worth twice its price if only for the difference it makes to beer, and...

we could go on for hours like this, but how about you having a Frigidaire of your own? The very latest models, fitted with Hydrator and Cold Control that produces frozen sweets, ice creams in a jiffy, can be installed in your kitchen for a very small sum. Fully automatic. Dead silent. TONG KA WAN.

DATE OF OPENING CEREMONY.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

CANTON, June 29.
In compliance with the request of Mr. Tang Shao Yi, the Provincial Council appropriated yesterday $30,000 as opening expenses for the development of Tong Ka Wan into a world duty-free port.

The opening ceremony will be held on July 30 at Tong Ka Wan, after which actual work will start.

An elaborate programme is being arranged for the occasion.

All the high officials of the Government are expected to be present at the opening meeting.

Mr. Tang Shao Yi left Canton for Tong Ka Wan by the gunboat Chungshan this morning. He was accompanied by Mr. Wong Kai So, the magistrate of the "Model District." He said to newspapermen that he could not remain any longer in Canton at present, as his presence in Tong Ka Wan is essential.

MEDICAL CONFERENCE AT NANKING.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

CANTON, June 29.
Dr. Lee Woon Sun, Professor at the Kwangtung Kwong Wa Medical College, left Canton this morning for Nanking in compliance with the request of the Department of Health of the Central Government which is revising the medical terminology.

Dr. Lee contributed an article in the Chinese Medical Journal, and the Health Authorities at the capital despatched a telegram to Dr. Lee at Kwong Wa, urging him to leave for the capital for a conference with experts there. His colleagues and students at Kwong Wa gave him a big send-off party last night.

FLOODS ON WEST RIVER.

Most of the districts along the West River, especially Samshui, Sainan, Shihuing and Yuehsing, have been flooded consequent on the rise of the river, and much damage is being done to the crops.

Last week, the bank of the river at Shatowai near Samshui burst, and the rice shoots in the fields were washed away, the farmers sustaining considerable loss in consequence.

Shipping on the West River has become somewhat hazardous. Recently, a tow-boat, loaded with rice, was sunk by the strong currents and two men were drowned. The rice cargo, valued at $10,000, was lost.

TIGER SHOT AT WAICHOW.

A tiger was recently shot by the villagers in Poklo district, near Waichow, according to the Chinese Press.

The villagers living at the foot of the Lofou Mountain found that a number of pigs had been devoured by some wild animal at night. They waited for the unwelcome visitor every evening, and on Wednesday night they saw a tiger coming towards the village. They fired at the animal and killed it. The tiger weighed over 200 catties and was sold for $50.

SAD END TO BATHING PARTY.

CHINESE DROWNED AT BIG WAVE BAY.

The death by drowning of one of a number of picnickers at Big Wave Bay occurred on Saturday, when it was reported that a Chinese, Lo Kan Tung, aged 29, was carried out to sea and drowned at about 6.40 p.m. Lo, who is stated to be a poor swimmer, was in company with a friend, Chan Cho Tung, who is said to be the head of an export firm.

According to a report made to the Police, Lo was carried out by a big wave before he had time to cry out. Not being a strong swimmer, he was not capable of giving much resistance and eventually sank. There were a number of bathers at the beach, and Dr. Dawson, a member of a launch party, made an attempt at rescue by throwing out a life belt. Lo, however, was unable to seize the life belt, and was subsequently lost to view. Efforts were made to recover the body but no sign of the deceased could be found.

MANCHU WARLORD AND NANKING.

HIS LOYALTY DOUBTED.

SHANSI FORCES PRESSING ON TAIAN.

Contrary to current reports, Chang Hsueh Liang, the Manchuria warlord, has declined the offer of the Nanking regime appointing him Vice-Generalissimo of the Nationalist army, navy, and air forces. In a wire to the Central Government, Chang said that he would not accept the post under the pretext that he doubted his ability to fulfill the duties of such an important post. This has caused much speculation as his loyalty to the Nanking regime remains doubtful in spite of his verbal support.

The scope of the present war, which is said to be the greatest in China's annals, extends as far as Taiwan in the north, Hengchow in the south, Chengchow in the west and Hsuehchow in the east. At present, the position of Hankow is no longer precarious as the rebels in Hunan have abandoned their intention of attacking that place, and as the Nanking troops in Honan along the Peking-Hankow Railway line have recaptured Yencheng.

On the Lunghai front, the Nanking forces have made some progress and are now advancing on Kaifeng, the Honan capital.

The situation on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway is most serious. The Shansi troops are pressing upon Taiwan, and threaten to attack Hsuehchow, the base of the Nanking army.

Chiang Prepared.

The following Chinese cable advices from Shanghai give details of the latest situation:

Marshal Chiang Kai Shek has instructed his left wing on the Lunghai front to attack Kaifeng from the south. He has also instructed the troops on the Peking-Hankow Railway to push forward to recapture Hsuehchow and attack Chengchow. Heavy troops have been rushed to Hsuehchow, where martial law has been enforced, and troops are patrolling the city and suburbs.

Heavy defensive works have been erected between Taiwan and Yenchow on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway. Taiwan is being besieged by the Shansi troops. The Nanking forces, who are defending the city under Ma Hung Kwei, are waiting for reinforcements.

Shih Yu Shan has wired Yen Hsi Shan, declining the latter's offer of the Governorship of Shantung, on the ground that it was not his troops, but those under Fu Tso Yi, which captured Taiwan.

On the Peking-Hankow Railway the Nanking troops under Hsu Yuan Chuan have recaptured Yencheng, and the Kuomintang forces have fallen back on the north bank of the Luho. The right wing has captured Chowchiakow.

"FUNNY FACE" AT THE STAR.

ANOTHER SPARKLING SHOW.

There was again a very good house at the Star Theatre last night when the Salisbury Company presented another musical farce entitled "Funny Face." Like "The Girl Friend," what is lacking as regards plot is amply made up for in singing and dancing—especially the dancing.

Mr. J. Grant Anderson is to the fore again as a gunman's apprentice, the part that Mr. Leslie Henderson took when the play was produced in London. As the man from Oswaldtwistle he brought the house down—Mr. Henderson must look to his laurels.

As Frankie Wynne Miss Noreen Hamilton was, as usual, her bright and sprightly self, and her dancing was exceptionally fine, as was that of all the members of the company. "Funny Face" will be shown again to-night, and to-morrow the famous London success "The Man from Toronto" will be presented.

At the Thames Police Court recently Ng Fong, a Chinese donkeyman on the steamer Benvraki, lying in the West India Dock, was charged with concealing on the vessel four pistols and 400 rounds of ammunition with the intention of evading the prohibition of the importation of such goods into Great Britain. He was also charged with the possession of the goods without having a certificate from the police. It was stated that the ship came from Antwerp. The pistols were disclosed in a coal bunker, wrapped up in sailcloth with the ammunition. In Court Fong said that he was taking the articles home to China to protect his home from robbers from whom he had suffered. He was fined $10, with the alternative in default of two months imprisonment.

MOTORISTS' LUCKY ESCAPE.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT ON CASTLE PEAK ROAD.

MEMBER OF SALISBURY COMPANY INJURED.

A miraculous escape from death was the experience of two European motorists who were involved in an accident on the Castle Peak Road yesterday at about 6.30 p.m. The car concerned, No. 1716, was at the time returning from Hunter's Lodge, in Fanling, to Kowloon. The accident occurred near the 13 mile Beach at a point known as Tsing Lung Tao.

It would appear from a report made to the authorities that Mr. Kenneth Burrell, a member of the Salisbury players, was one of the passengers on the car. Another passenger is reported to be Flying Officer Somerhaugh.

The car, it would appear, had swerved to the right to pass another car travelling in the same direction. Just as it was abreast of the other car, a third car appeared from the opposite direction. The passing car had to swerve sharply to the left to avoid a collision. It is understood that the car, on which Mr. Burrell and his friend were passengers, skidded a fairly long way after swerving, eventually falling over the edge of the road down the hillside, about 10 feet below.

When the car fell both passengers were thrown out, Mr. Burrell being unconscious for a while. Assistance was promptly forthcoming, and Mr. Burrell was removed to the Kowloon Hospital very soon afterwards.

Back to the Stage.

The damaged car on the hillside was seen by many people who were out at Castle Peak yesterday, and rumours of all kinds concerning a serious accident were freely circulated, but friends of Mr. Burrell will be pleased to hear that although at one time after the accident he was suffering from concussion he made his appearance at the Star Theatre last night, when the Salisbury Players presented "Funny Face."

Interviewed by a Daily Press representative, Mr. Kenneth Burrell said that he was forbidden by the doctor to leave the hospital last night, as it was feared that he might be suffering from serious internal injuries. Mr. Burrell, however, did not disappoint Hong Kong theatre-goers and took his place with the Company last night.

He explained to our representative that the car skidded quite a distance, and attributed this to the sand on the surface of the road. The car, he said, was smashed to smithereens and they owed their escape merely to the fortunate circumstance that both he and his fellow-passenger were thrown into some bushes.

Carried On Despite Pain.

It is interesting to add that prior to Mr. Kenneth Burrell leaving the hospital last night he was informed that he was taking a big risk, but he did not hesitate to sign a statement exonerating everybody from blame should any complications ensue as a result of his leaving the hospital.

Between acts, Mr. Burrell was evidently suffering from pain but he doggedly stuck till the end of the show last night. His many friends and well-wishers in the Colony will hope that no serious consequences will arise from this gentleman's plucky conduct, and will wish him a speedy return to normalcy.

CABARET CONCERT AT TAIKOO.

The Taikoo Club held a most successful cabaret concert on Saturday night, which was attended by a very large number of members and friends.

The hall of the Club was tastefully decorated and the entire programme was quite unusual with each item delightfully presented. Mrs. E. Snowden Jones sang a few English ballads, and the manner in which she delivered "The Captive Lark" and "Cherry Ripe" charmed the audience, who repeatedly demanded encores.

Mr. J. J. Cornelius, who sang several ballads, also contributed much to the success of the concert. He was ably accompanied by Mrs. Cornelius.

The humorous side of the programme was well looked after by the Kai Tak Follies who presented a number of comic songs and sketches.

Music for the dancing which followed was supplied by the Aeroband.

CORRESPONDENCE.

OUR EDUCATION SYSTEM.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "HONG KONG DAILY PRESS.")

SIR,—I have been waiting patiently for some reply, official or otherwise, to the letters from "Lux" you published recently on educational matters.

Statistics are proverbially said to prove anything, nevertheless on the face of things, "Lux" seems to have made out a case worth answering. Even if it is not desirable to copy here the educational system of the Straits Settlements, or East or West Africa, in every detail, it is obvious that the Hong Kong system is bad.

The Hong Kong Government has in the past depended on a large grant-in-aid scheme, on a large extent to educate the youth of the Colony, yet the share of the Colony's revenue appropriated for education has been divided between the Government and other schools in a most inequitable way.

I have yet to learn what grounds there can be for spending $100 to $170 per head per annum at some schools and not more than a quarter of this sum at other schools (Grant-in-Aid) doing exactly the same work and reaching the same standard (to mention only one criterion) in external examinations.

Surely the difference should not be so great as this? Is the general public, by the way, aware that even this figure of $170 is not the total cost? It does not include the cost of administration nor of maintenance of buildings, nor of passages and furloughs; the Grant-in-Aid schools have all these expenses to bear.

Some Grant-in-Aid secondary schools charge higher fees for those who can afford them. These fees have been increased by from 30 to 50 per cent. in the last ten years. As one step towards economy, could not the Government similarly charge those able to pay a fee somewhat nearer the actual cost of their education? Incidentally, might not this enhance their appreciation of such education?

If the Colony can afford to increase its expenditure so much for Government schools, which only reach a very small number of children, and we were told "last Thursday" in the Legislative Council that it can, then it can certainly afford to increase its help to Grant-in-Aid schools, and cease its exploitation of them and the worthy people who control and staff them.

At one and the same time it would thus show its indebtedness to these schools, some of which have a long and honourable history behind them, and also reduce its own total expenditure. Might I commend this point to the forthcoming Commission on Retrenchment? Yours, etc.,

COMPLICATIONS IN CHINESE POLITICS.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "HONG KONG DAILY PRESS.")

SIR,—I beg the hospitality of your columns to call attention to a misconception which exists in the minds of many Britons in China and in the home country and which, in the future, leads to serious misunderstandings, if not further complicates the issues, between China and Great Britain.

I am referring to the confusion between the Kuomintang "Left" and the Communist Party of China. Both are referred to as "the extremists." Prominent "Leftists" are frequently identified with the Communists, or called "notorious pro-Communists," etc. Before July, 1927, during the period of co-operation between the Kuomintang and the Third International, such an identification had a certain basis in fact. But then it was not only the "Left" who advocated the alliance with Soviet Russia and the Third International, but practically all the prominent members of the present Kuomintang Administration, such as Hsueh Han Min, Sun Fo, T. T. Soong, Tan Yen Kai, etc.

General Chiang Kai Shek himself during 1925-26 often expressed the opinion that the Chinese Revolution was organically related to the World Revolution and that, therefore, the Kuomintang should accept the directions of the Third International. And whereas Wang Ching Wei at Canton always insisted that Borodin was merely an adviser without the right to vote, General Chiang often quoted a saying of Dr. Sun to him that, in taking Borodin's advice, he would be taking his (Dr. Sun's) advice.

Naturally, Borodin reciprocated by exhorting that "no matter whether Communist or Kuomintang, all must obey General Chiang." It had been due to General Chiang's action, in placing guards at the disposal of Borodin after an attempted assassination, that the myth spread that Borodin had become the "super-Governor" of Canton.

This is not the place to deal with the complicated history of the separation between the Kuomintang and the Communists, for which I refer to my newly-published "Inner History of the Chinese Revolution," but it is a fact that the C.E.C. meeting of the Kuomintang which, on December 10, 1927, decided on the suspension of diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia, was held under the Chairmanship of Wang Ching Wei, the Leader of the "Left."

The suggestion that the "Left" leaders have any connection either with the Third Internationale or with Soviet Russia is most violently resented by them, as anyone acquainted with their writings in, and with the editorials of, the Sun Ching Daily News (Hong Kong), the leading organ of the "Left" in China, can testify. The Hong Kong Communist paper, the Shiao Jih Pao, from its very establishment last year until its prohibition by the Hong Kong Government yesterday, devoted its editorials principally to attacking the Left and its leader Wang Ching Wei, rather than Chiang Kai Shek and the Nanking Government.

The defeat of the Ironsides and their Kwangsi allies in Kwangtung last December was due to a certain extent to their being suddenly attacked in their rear by Communist troops. After their defeat they retreated to Southern Kwangsi, where they suppressed a Communist insurrection in Lungchow and Pakai. The Communists were at that time also looting and plundering several French missionary stations, a fact appreciated by the French Government of Indo-China.

It is further an open secret that about a fortnight ago General Chiang Kai Shek sent a delegate, returned student from Mr. Tang Man Yi, to the Communist Generals Pank Tek Wai, Tsu Tek and Mo Tsu Tung—who are at the present moment ravaging the provinces of Kiangsi and Hunan—for the purpose of inducing them to adopt the slogan:—"Down with Chiang Kai Shek; Support the Left." General Chiang's aim is obvious; the continued identification of the "Left" with the Communists can only bring discredit to the former, an aim in common with that of the Communists. Hence we are witnessing the curious spectacle of Communist troops being left unhindered by the Nanking armies who at best put up sham fights against them, while being attacked by, or attacking, the Left armies they are supposed to support.

Those well acquainted with the Chinese political and military situation are of the opinion that the downfall of General Chiang Kai Shek is inevitable and imminent, and that the Leader of the "Left" Wang Ching Wei, will be called upon, by acclamation, to form the new Government of the Chinese Republic. While so many issues are still unsettled, the continued confusion of the "Left" with the Communists cannot, with these changes in prospect, be calculated to render the relations of the new Government, when established, with the foreign Powers more easy, leading eventually to all kinds of misunderstandings and possibly even to the revival of the cursed civil war in China.

It is in a spirit of appeal that I address to you this letter, hoping by its publication to contribute something, however insignificant, to that better understanding of Chinese politics among Westerners which is essential if the Great Powers are to formulate the right policy towards China, which alone can secure permanent peace in the Pacific to the benefit of every one concerned.—Yours, etc.,

THE AVIATION TRAGEDY IN CANTON.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "HONG KONG DAILY PRESS.")

SIR,—With reference to the item under the above heading published in your issue of the 27th instant, we would like to make a few corrections.

As we are agents for the type of machine in question, a representative of ours personally visited Canton to obtain full details of the accident, and the following was ascertained.

Firstly, the machine did not catch fire in the air.

Secondly, as the occupants were killed instantly and the machine carried no means of communication with the ground or other aircraft, we fail to see how the news of the pilot's observations during flight was obtained.

Thirdly, the engine was still running when it hit the ground. The official Court of Enquiry held on the matter decided that the machine was in a satisfactory condition, and that the accident was due to failure on the part of the pilot, who had been feeling particularly unwell before the flight.—Yours, etc.,

CHINA'S LATEST NEED.

AMONG many other things lacking in China's political make-up is a national anthem, but this defect may be remedied by next September. The Ministry of Education has announced the offering of an award of $1,000 for the text of a national song which will "embody the true character of the Chinese people." According to the announcement, the song must be such as to inspire in the people a spirit of joy and a sense of patriotism; yet the wording must be simple and euphonic that it will be easily learned by both young and old. The contest will be closed in August.

So far, China has never had an official national song. A few years after the establishment of the Republic, the Y.M.C.A. and church people made up a song in Chinese which was sung to the tune of "God Save the King." For a long time it was used in churches and missionary schools as the Chinese National Anthem. Later, two more songs appeared. One of them was endorsed by the educational authorities and for a while was widely used by the schools. The words, however, were too hard to understand and the tune too difficult to sing, so they never became popular. Moreover, as these songs were not officially adopted by the Government, they were soon forgotten, but forced by necessity Chinese students abroad utilized them on occasion.

Since the establishment of the capital in Nanking the Party song, which was also obtained through a contest, has been used as a makeshift for a national anthem. It is sung on all occasions, and a free translation reads like this:—

"San Ming Chu I (Three Principles of the People), our Party's guide

In nation building, in world-brotherhood promotion.

Many martyrs have gone before us;

By day and by night, therefore,

our principle we must follow;

Diligent, courageous, faithful, loyal we must be.

One heart, one virtue be our determination.

From beginning to end."

If only the unity and diligence in well-doing mentioned in the verse were actually observable in the conduct of national affairs, how much happier China would be, and how prosperous and contented her people!

GERMANY'S GREAT DAY.

At twelve o'clock to-night the last Allied soldier will have been withdrawn from German soil. Germany will resume sovereignty over her entire territory, and the nation will give a sigh of relief at the end of this long drawn out humiliation. In December, 1918, shortly after the armistice, French, British, Italian, Belgian and American troops crossed the Rhine and established the Allied occupation, which was to entrench the military victory of the Allied armies to serve as a wall-shutting in the chaos then prevailing in Germany, and as a guarantee of German fulfilment of the military, political, economic and financial conditions of the Versailles Treaty. In later years the occupation more and more assumed the character of a mortgage, which Germany's ex-enemies were in a position to foreclose if the Germans failed to meet their reparations debt. Most Germans to-day will be thinking of GUSTAV STRESEMANN, because it was he—more than any other individual—who concentrated German foreign policy on that liberation of the Rhineland, which will be consummated at midnight.

It was especially he who helped to bring about the evacuation to-day, instead of in 1935, as the Peace Treaty provided.

When the German flag replaces the French tricolor in the so-called third Rhineland zone it will signalize the withdrawal from Germany of the 35,000 French troops, the last to maintain the Allied occupation. With their departure, the 2,500,000 German inhabitants of the third zone again become masters in their own houses. The first and second Rhineland zones, previously evacuated in accordance with international agreement, will now rejoin the sister zone in the Rhineland, but although the German people and Government thus once more hold complete sway on their own territory, the strip of land separating Germany from its Western neighbours will remain demilitarized, and the forts and strategic roads and railways in this region will continue to be dismantled or left in desuetude as a pledge of security to France and Belgium.

The agreement which fixed June 30 as the final date by which all Allied troops must leave the Rhineland was concluded at the first Hague Conference in August, 1929, and signed at the second Hague parley's last January. The British Government, more conciliatory and with a greater sense of security than the French, withdrew the last of its troops from the third zone on December 15, only. The French remained, tarring the British and Belgian representatives in the Rhineland Control Commission, whose presence there in recent months has merely been a gesture of courtesy towards the French. The French, too, have gradually reduced their army of occupation, so that little more than a military police force remained at the end.

Germany as a whole will be glad that the occupation, that constant reminder of four horrible years and the ensuing defeat and privation, is disappearing. The long invasion of German territory, moreover, retarded the resumption of German friendship with France, and served as a barrier to any surmounting of ill-feeling, still partly kept alive by jingoism in both countries, but against which the more intelligent and sensible members of the two Governments, the more acute industrialists and bankers, and the working folk of both countries have fought. The celebration of the Rhineland's regained freedom will reach its climax when President HINDENBURG leaves Berlin on July 23 for a visit to the emancipated regions—his first since the war. He will first go to Speyer, in the Palatinate, and then proceed through the Rhineland, his journey lending the final and most impressive note to the national festivities. He will visit several towns by automobile, and perhaps drift down the Rhine itself on a presidential steamer, his massive, immobile figure symbolizing to the Rhinelanders the firmness of the new Germany's will to gain a place in the sun.

The "Freedom of Harlesden"

(in London) has been bestowed on a yellow-breasted Australian cockatoo—except when a Salvation Army band is in the neighbourhood, when he is put securely under lock and key. "Cookie," who belongs to the Rev. F. W. Turner, the rector of Christ Church, Harlesden, cannot, even after ten years of vicarage atmosphere, resist the call of a Salvation Army band. He will follow one of miles, perching near by while it plays and flapping his wings and shrieking his loudest. This remarkable bird also likes to perch on the top of the organ while the rector plays. Friends of the rector and crowds of children go periodically to the rectory to watch the bird's trick performances at the command of its master.

Mrs. Anna Vanzyl, the oldest white woman in South Africa, died recently within a week of her 114th birthday. She took part in the trek of Dutch farmers which resulted in the founding of the Transvaal. Her father and grandfather were killed by natives, and she and her grandmother were kept prisoners for three months in a mountain cave.

That the old mode of travel in winter time by dog team over the frozen lakes and rivers of the Far North is now being abandoned by residents of the Mackenzie River area is shown by the latest report of the Western Canada Airways, whose planes carried 780 passengers in the Far North during the five months' period of winter operations. The northern resident now prefers to leave his team of Husky dogs at home while he rides the sky lanes to and from the trading posts in Canada's hinterland. In addition to the comparatively large number of passengers carried by the airplanes, 110,000 pounds of mail and express were delivered by air transport to northern residents in this same period. The mail carried to Aklavik on the Arctic Ocean from Edmonton during the winter season totalled some 27,000 pounds.

Mr. Snowden's ejaculation of "Guinea pig" during Mr. Oliver Stanley's remarks on the Budget in the House of Commons had a playful sequel in the Westmorland constituency of that M.P. A couple of real guinea pigs were recently presented to Mr. Stanley in a large Easter egg, and the gift was gratefully received and handed over as pets for the children. If this kind of joke becomes popular, the Speaker might be persuaded to relax some of the prohibitions on "unparliamentary language" in order that honourable members might acquire even more valuable exhibits than a pair of guinea pigs. Indeed, a sort of forfeit system might be introduced into the Mother of Parliaments; that is to say, one member might be allowed to call another a Large Black Pig, but only on condition that he thereafter presented his opponent with a full-sized specimen of that distinguished breed. However, they are a canny lot at Westminster; there would probably be a rival of archaic and mythological terms of abuse like "cockatrice" and "basilisk," which would entail no visit to the nearest cattle market.

One of England's greatest literary treasures, the Bedford Book of Hours, executed in 1514, may go to America if $24,500 is not forthcoming within the next few weeks. In an appeal issued by the British Museum trustees in March it was stated that $24,500 for the purchase of the Luttrell Psalter and the Bedford Book was advanced to the British Museum by Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan. The loan was for a year on condition that if the purchase money for either book was not repaid at the end of that time that book should become Mr. Morgan's property. The Luttrell Psalter has been redeemed for $31,500, and is now a national possession. An official of the British Museum said: "Whether or not the Bedford Book of Hours will find a home in America, as so many famous works of art have done in the past, depends entirely on the British public. The anniversary of the sale is July 29, and the money must be raised by then, or we shall lose the manuscript—possibly for ever."

Mr. James A. Farrell, for twenty years President of the United States Steel Corporation, said recently before a meeting of purchasing agents that the present business depression was due to cupidity. The corollary of that statement is that, as there is as much wealth as ever before, "good times" or normal trade and industry merely await the turning of people's thoughts, and consequently their actions, into productive channels of common usefulness.

The Hon. Mrs. Nellie Levy, sister of Lord Bearsted, and heiress to the Shell petrol millions, was married quietly at the register office, St. George's, Hanover-square, recently, to Mr. Basil Ionides. Mrs. Ionides is one of the richest women in England. Only a few friends were present at the ceremony. Lord Bearsted was one of the witnesses. Mr. Ionides has been responsible for the interior decoration of many noted houses and of the Savoy Theatre. His clever employment of colours has made him famous. He decorated the interior of his wife's house in Berkeley-square, where the couple will live after they return from Paris, where the honeymoon is being spent.

When British women fly to the Continent they almost always pass the time looking down at the scenery below. American women, aloft in their own country, apparently do not. The manager of an airline between New York and Boston has been making plaintive remarks on the subject. During the six months his service has been working, he declares, more than 6,000 sheets of the line's notepaper and 9,000 postcards have been used—and 1,500 sheets of his notepaper taken home "as souvenirs." "Women write more letters in aeroplanes than any other passengers," he says. "I have seen women riding over the line for the first time without lifting their eyes from their writing, paying absolutely no attention to the scenery, which is one of the features of the trip. The record trip to date occurred last month, when 50 letters were handed to the steward to be mailed when the plane reached its destination." But this is not all another example of the characteristic American anxiety not to see things but to do them—and, above all, to prove that you have done them!

Nevertheless, it is something to get such an admission as the following—from a native Hospital committee:—"Each of the two medical systems has its advantages, and as long as life can be saved it does not matter whether the method adopted be foreign or native."—Hong Kong Daily Press, June 30, 1880.

AUSTRALIA IN STRONG POSITION.

WOODFULL AND PONSFORD MAKE FINE START: BRADMAN KEEPS UP GOOD WORK.

DULEEPSINGHI'S FINE ACHIEVEMENT: NEW TEST RECORD FOR LORD'S.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

LONDON, June 28.

The Australians are putting up a great fight in the second Test; at the close of play on the second day they had compiled the huge total of 404 runs for the loss of only two wickets.

England's first innings realised 425 runs during the course of which K. S. Duleepsinghi, the brilliant Sussex batsman, scored 173 runs—the highest individual score in Anglo-Australian Tests at Lord's. A crowd of 30,000 saw "Duleep" achieve the highest distinction of a cricketer's career, and although he offered chances at 65 and 98, he gave a delightful exhibition during his four hours and three-quarters at the wickets, cutting and leg-gliding superbly.

In his innings of 173, "Duleep" sent the ball to the ropes on twenty-one occasions. His county-mate, Maurice Tate, also batted excellently, and was not defeated until he had exceeded the half-century mark by four. Tate gave a delightful exhibition of free-hitting, and his partnership with Duleepsinghi produced 98 runs in 70 minutes. "Maurice" hit eight boundaries.

The remaining English batsmen did not do well with the possible exception of "Farmer" White, who made 23 out of the 38 put on for the last innings. After losing Hobbs early, England's innings closed for 425 runs.

Australia Begin Well.

There was a crowd of some 20,000, present when the two "Bills"—Woodfull and Ponsford—walked out to the wickets to open Australia's innings. Mindful of what happened in the previous match, the Australian captain started cautiously but soon got his "eye in." He then proceeded to give a demonstration on the fine art of batsmanship. Ponsford, on the other hand, did not seem to worry himself unduly, and in spite of the fact that there were four men fielding in the slips, cut Allen through them to the boundary, only to follow up with a lusty drive for a four to send the 50 up after play had been in progress for 70 minutes. The English fielding was very keen, and Ponsford had to fight doggedly for his runs, but with a neat glide, he reached his 50 after 106 minutes with the crowd applauding loudly.

Woodfull was playing solidly, and when play adjourned for the lunch interval, he was 34 against Ponsford's 59, both batsmen being still undefeated. The score was now 98 for no wickets.

After luncheon these two giants continued their innings, after which play was adjourned for a while in order that the teams might be presented to His Majesty the King. Immediately after play was resumed, Ponsford was caught by Hammond in the slips off White's first over. He had collected 81 runs, and gave a brilliant all-round batting display, staying at the wickets for three hours and hitting eight boundaries. Bradman joined Woodfull, who was still scoring very slowly, and at the tea interval the Australian skipper had 105 to Bradman's 54. The score was now 244 for 1 wicket down.

Bradman's Quick Scoring.

Bradman reached his half-century in forty-five minutes, during which time only 60 runs were scored, thus giving an idea how long Woodfull took to get his runs. Bradman was driving and pulling delightfully, while "Bill" Woodfull went after sharp singles. The latter brightened up some little time after.

Together these two giants brought the score to 393, when the Australian captain was smartly stumped by Duckworth off Robins. He made 155 runs in a stodgy innings, and was unlucky to get out the way he did, being beaten by playing forward to a deceptive ball which went under his bat. He was at the wickets for five hours and a half, and during all this time only scored nine fours.

It was a wonderful day for Australian cricket, for after Woodfull and Ponsford had tamed the "Lions" attack, Bradman lashed out at everything that was sent down, and hoodwinked the fielders with powerful drives and beautiful late cutting. He is 155 not out, scored in 165 minutes, and reached the boundary seventeen times.

After Woodfull was out, Kippax joined Bradman, who was still going strong, but stumps were drawn after a few runs had been added, Bradman's score standing at 155, while Kippax had gathered 7, both men being undefeated.

The scores were:—

SHANGHAI GAOL WARDERS STRIKE.

FORTY INDIANS DISMISSED AND ONE ARRESTED.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

SHANGHAI, June 28.

Forty Mohammedan and Sikh warders at one of the Municipal Gaols have been dismissed, and one agitator was arrested at H.B.M.'s Consulate this morning. The trouble was due to dissatisfaction being felt over the promotion of a Havildar to Havildar Major.

The discontented warders visited the Consulate yesterday and presented a petition. They refused to return to work.

In spite of warnings that the alternative would be dismissal, the warders again visited the Consulate this morning, when they were addressed by a Consular official and discharged.

The agitator is alleged to have urged the storming of the Consulate. A riot squad were present in case of emergency, but the men left peacefully.

More than 600 Indian warders are employed in the two Council Gaols.

"SOUTHERN CROSS" AVIATORS.

TREMENDOUS OVATION AT NEW YORK.

[REUTER'S AMERICAN SERVICE.]

NEW YORK, June 28.

The "Southern Cross" aviators were the guests of New York City. They received a tremendous ovation at the City Hall, where they were presented with a Scroll of Honour.

Just as the Mayor had finished his address, the table upon which the newspaper men and camera men were grouped, collapsed, all being thrown to the floor in a squirming mass.

"The most perfect example of a tail-spin," commented Major Kingsford-Smith. "I am glad it did not happen to us when crossing the Atlantic."

The flyers are meeting President Hoover on Monday, then flying on to California, thus completing the circuit of the globe which was begun two years ago.

NEW TAXES NECESSARY.

[THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.]

BERLIN, June 28.

New taxes needed to cover the Budget deficit and the cost of Germany's average unemployment figure of 1,600,000 were announced by Chancellor Brüning.

The new taxes will include a tax on bachelors and spinsters, yielding 111,000,000 marks; a five per cent. surtax on incomes of over 2400 per annum, yielding 58,000,000 marks; and a non-recurring emergency tax on the salaries of officials, which will yield 135,000,000 marks.

Various "cuts" in the Estimates of the different Ministries, it is estimated, will save 700,000,000 marks.

"The Kuominchun made a futile effort to break through the left wing of our line on the 27th and 28th inst.

"A Kuominchun division on the 27th inst. attacked in the vicinity of Taikang and were repulsed by artillery, after which several other attempts were made to pierce our line in this sector. Then our left wing launched a counter-attack, and the Kuominchun rebels were forced to make a precipitous retreat towards Kaifeng."

"The rebel commander barely escaped with his life."

"Over 2,000 prisoners and a quantity of munitions were seized."

ANGLO-JAPANESE AMITY.

ASSURANCES OF LASTING FRIENDSHIP.

[BRITISH WIRELESS SERVICE.]

RUSSY, June 27.

The text is published of messages exchanged between King George and the Emperor of Japan on the occasion of the visit to London of Prince Takamatsu, second brother of the Emperor and Princess Takamatsu.

King George's Message.

King George, in a message to the Emperor despatched yesterday, said:—

"The Queen and I have this afternoon welcomed as our guests, with feelings of delight Prince and Princess Takamatsu, and we are glad to see them both in the best of health. It gives me the greatest pleasure to inform Your Imperial Majesty that I have today promoted you to the rank of Field Marshal in my Army. I have entrusted the baton to your brother to hand to Your Imperial Majesty, on his return home, when I hope he will carry with him the renewed assurance of lasting friendship between our two countries."

Emperor of Japan Replies.

The Emperor of Japan, in reply, said:—

"I hasten to express my cordial thanks for the warm reception extended to the Prince and Princess by your Majesties by members of your Royal Family and by your officers and people in every part of your Empire which they visited. Now that they have realised their ardent desire of forming ties of personal friendship with Your Majesties and with members of your family, I trust they will enjoy a pleasant sojourn in your country as I myself did when I visited it some years ago, conducting, I am confident, to a furtherance of the bonds of unity and friendship which so happily unite our two realms."

"It affords me the greatest pleasure to learn that Your Majesty has accorded me the exalted rank of Field Marshal in your army and entrusted the baton to the Prince to convey to me, also that Your Majesty has graciously been pleased to confer the Grand Cross of the Royal Victorian Order on my brother. For these manifestations of Your Majesty's sincere friendship and goodwill, I would ask you to accept my heartfelt and renewed thanks, together with my best wishes for the welfare of your Royal House and prosperity of the British Empire."

LOCAL BASEBALL.

"TEXACO" GOES DOWN FIGHTING.

Opening their first innings in great style by scoring two runs, the newly-formed "Texaco" ball nine put up a good fight against South China and although luck was against them from the very start, they put up a good exhibition, and were beaten by the narrow margin of three runs.

The Texas men were unfortunate in losing the services of Russakoff who hurt his leg badly when attempting to gather a "fly" at centre-field, after the third innings.

David Leonard ("Texaco") made the biggest hit of the afternoon when he skied the pill right across the ground. It looked a certain homer but "Big Dave" was only allowed two sacks as the ball hit the grandstand on the far end of the field.

The teams were:—

HONG KONG WINS "THE RUBBER."

MEIJI TENNIS STARS BEATEN.

T. FUJIKURA CLAIMS MEIJI'S ONLY VICTORY.

The tennis players from the Meiji University were again seen in action against the local stars on the Kowloon Cricket Club ground on Saturday, and on the day's play things were "all square," as each side won one match, while the third one was left drawn.

H.E. the Governor and Lady Peel were present during the afternoon, while another interested spectator was the Consul-General for Japan.

The most interesting game of the day was the singles tie between T. Fujikura, junior champion of Japan, and C. A. L. Runjahn. It was a very fast game, and both men played clever tennis. Fujikura claimed the match by two straight sets, but the score does not give a true indication of the run of play.

The Japanese player started in whirlwind fashion to win the first three games, after which Runjahn brought off some clever shots, and from this stage the standard of play

WHY INDIA TIRES LEAD in the QUALITY TIRE MARKET

Start with this cross-section of the new India Heavy Service as an example of the 1930 tire line.

- 1.—Extra heavy tread of the highest selected grades of rubber available—processed to add unusual abrasion proof qualities.
- 2.—Sidewalls protected from rut and curb wear by rugged reinforcing bars made in one piece with tread.
- 3.—Crown plies of carcass of wide spaced cord fabric instead of the cross-woven fabric ordinarily used.
- 4.—Extra heavy specially compounded cushion gum between crown plies.
- 5.—Extra heavy pure amber coloured friction around each cord and between all plies.
- 6.—Only long staple combed Egyptian cotton used.
- 7.—Cord fabrics of the finest known construction (23-5-3) give the best combination of elasticity, strength and durability.
- 8.—Strong, flexible gums at edges of flipper strips and at points of beads give greater flexibility and less chance of heat at these vital points.
- 9.—Double beads allow unusually strong tie between beads and plies.
- 10.—Extra wide, long pointed bead seats tire firmly on rim—prevents bead rocking, bead failure and tube wear.
